The University cooperates with institutions of higher education in most countries in Europe and also with many countries around the world. Research and other activities are conducted within the framework of over one hundred international agreements with foreign partners. The members of the academic staff of the University of Gdańsk conduct scientific and scholarly research on a world-class level.

One of the assets of the University is its relationship with the sea. The reputation of the University in marine matters is built on its research stations with their international reputations – the Hel Marine Station of the Institute of Oceanography, the Bird Migration Research Station and the Biology Station. The university's marine image is also enhanced by its fields of study, specialisations and scientific research connected with the sea and with the Baltic coast in particular.

The University's Campus in Gdańsk, Sopot and Gdynia is one of the most modern academic complexes in northern Poland. New faculty buildings, work units, and laboratories, provided with state-of-the-art equipment, open up new possibilities for scientific and scholarly research, and for cooperation with the economy and with business. They also offer 21st century conditions for study, and positively influence the development of a workforce for the administration and economy of the Pomeranian Region and for the entire Baltic Region. The University of Gdańsk buildings, along with its scientific research stations, are located on a range of sites from Gdańsk to the Hel Peninsula, thus covering a sizeable portion of the Polish coast. Most of the faculties are concentrated in the three cities of Gdańsk, Gdynia and Sopot. The Tri-City, is one of the most beautiful places in Poland.

Emigration Museum in Gdynia

We Connect Stories, We Bring People Together

More than 20 million people of Polish descent live all around the world. The history of emigration from the Polish lands is made up of stories told by those who left for good and only for a time, those who left voluntarily and those who had no other choice, those who emigrated for personal reasons, as well as for economic and political ones. Emigration is a process which has continued for hundreds of years, one which is made up of countless individual decisions. It is the sum of the experiences of all those who leave their homeland.

The Emigration Museum in Gdynia is the first cultural institution in Poland fully devoted to the issue of emigration. The Museum's headquarters is situated at the heart of the Gdynia port, in a place which is iconic for many Polish expatriates – the historic Marine Station at 1 Polska Street. The 1933 building is a great example of modernist architecture. For decades, it served as the central transfer hub for passenger ships. This is where the famous Polish liners used to set sail from, with the famous m/s „Batory” among them. This is where relatives greeted and bid farewell to one another – the Marine Station being the first, or the last, place they would see in Poland. Today, the building is no longer a witness to history, but a place where stories are collected.

The Museum's main exhibition focuses on the last 200 years of Polish emigration – from the Great Emigration to the Industrial Revolution, the mass-exodus to America, life in the Brazilian jungle, the Chicago community, the dramatic fates during and after World War II, the difficult communist period and contemporary history after Poland was accepted into the European Union. In addition to memorabilia, the museum also features themed rooms, large-scale installations and the unique “Batory under construction” project, the goal of which is to build one of the largest passenger ship models in the world.

The Museum collects tangible and intangible emigration memorabilia. Our collection includes documents, prints, letters, photographs, souvenirs and ocean liner equipment elements, as well as recorded experiences of Polish expatriates. Each year, the Oral History Archive records stories told by Poles living all across the globe, and the Collections Department acquires valuable memorabilia, both by conducting its own research and thanks to the kindness of our donors. The Emigration Museum in Gdynia is happy to hear from everyone who would like to tell us about their time abroad or donate a souvenir, either from one's own journeys or a family member's.

The Museum is also involved in research, publishing, education, and cultural projects, all coordinated by its multidisciplinary team. It hosts temporary exhibitions, lectures, workshops for children and adults, conferences, concerts, theatre plays, art installations and literary meetings. Thanks to its diverse programme, the Museum has become one of the most important places of culture to visit in Tricity over the 4 years since its establishment. The number of visitors neared 200,000 in the previous year. In 2018, the Emigration Museum in Gdynia was honoured with the prestigious Źiva award for the best Slavic museum, and was one of Poland's 10 best museums according to TripAdvisor.
